4x4 of the Year.

Jeep Cherokee has just made 4x4 history. For the second time in four years, Jeep Cherokee has been named 4-Wheel & Off-Road magazine's "4x4 of the Year." It's a feat no other vehicle has ever accomplished. And it's a title that doesn't come easily to anyone.

From an impressive field that included Ford, Chevrolet, and Toyota among others, the magazine chose Jeep Cherokee the best all-around 4x4 of the year. And as they explain it, "This isn't domestic versus import. This isn't pickup versus sport/utility. This is quarter-mile times, horsepower to weight, and day after day of off-road driving."

If any single thing won the day for Jeep, it was Cherokee's optional 4.0 litre 6-cylinder engine. With 177 horsepower and 224 foot-pounds of torque, it's by far the most powerful engine in Cherokee's class. And not surprisingly, we made quick work of winning the quarter-mile acceleration test.

But beyond Cherokee's engine is a lot more that sets this vehicle apart. Like a choice of two or four doors. A choice of two shift-on-the-fly four-wheel drive systems. And room for five adults.

Go over Cherokee's advantages and it's easy to see why it is 4-Wheel & Off-Road magazine's "4x4 of the Year" again. Because in Cherokee, we've found the winning combination. The combination you'll find only in a Jeep.

Billy Martin

"I got married in January, I feel good. I feel healthy, I'm very happy and I'm anxious to return as manager of the Yankees." An old familiar face with a new look, Billy Martin. Well, somewhat new. Martin points out that he has not mellowed and will be more determined in 1988. Before the start of spring training the manager vowed, "We will have a club Yankee fans can be proud of and we're going to kick some butt." Indeed, Billy the Kid has played a prominent role in Yankee history. As a player under mentor Casey Stengel, Martin was a key player on several Yankee pennant winners in the 1950s, and was the recipient of the Babe Ruth Award for his play in the 1953 World Series. After retiring as a player in 1962, he continued working his magic as a manager, turning losers into instant winners. An acknowledged master of strategy, Martin is known for his fiery and exciting style. He has managed five different AL clubs, tying a modern-day record, and has taken four of them to post-season play. He is also a four-time winner of the Manager of the Year Award. Martin first joined the Yankees as manager in mid-1975, and when he started his first full term the following year it had been 12 years since the last Yankee pennant, the longest drought in team history since their first pennant in 1921. He led the Yankees to the 1976 pennant and in 1977 guided them to their first World Championship in 15 years. The '78 squad also went on to a World Series title and, while Martin resigned in July of that year, he played a major role in the last major league team to win back-to-back championships. Billy returned to manage the Yankees in 1979 and then it was on to Oakland for three years. He was back in New York again in 1983 and 1985 as the Yankees fell just a bit short in the AL

East title drives. However, after the Yankees retired his famous number one jersey on August 10, 1986, Billy knew he would be back as the Yankees field general before too long. Martin spent the last two years observing the team closely as a Special Advisor to Yankees Principal Owner George M. Steinbrenner and as an analyst on the club's telecasts on WPIX-TV. Now Billy's back and ready for action. "I've been a Yankee at heart all of my life," he explained. "I'm happy to be back and I'm ready to accept the challenge."

He can put up a building, but can't find time to build his own financial future.

His busy days are filled with looking to the future needs of his clients. But what about his future? All that extra effort he's putting into getting ahead will be wasted if a blueprint for his own financial life isn't drawn up.

Now is the time to work things out.

At Marine Midland Bank, our extra effort will help you make the most out of the money you've made. We'll put our financial wisdom and the tools of making money to work for you. The same way we've been doing it for hundreds of thousands of people since 1850.

THE COACHING STAFF

Manager
Billy Martin

Art Fowler

Once Billy Martin was named as manager of the Yankees, Art Fowler was considered a likely candidate to be the next pitching coach, and with good reason. Martin has managed five different AL clubs, with Fowler on his staff at every stop. Fowler's playing career included 25 pro seasons, nine in the majors. He spent the last of his playing days (1965-68, 1970) with Denver in the Twins organization, where he first joined forces with Martin. Fowler pitched for him in 1968 at Denver, and was a coach under him in 1969 when Martin took over as manager of the Twins. At age 48 Fowler returned to pitch for Denver in 1970, before joining Martin the next year in Detroit as a pitching coach. The two worked together in Detroit (1971-73), Texas (1974-75), New York (1977), and in 1980 at Oakland. Fowler returns to the Yankees where he coached from 1977-79 and 1983. Fowler is back under Martin, back with the Yankees, and expected to get Yankee hurlers pitching in the Fall Classic.

Mike Ferraro

The versatile Mike Ferraro has sported a number of different hats during his many years of service with the Yankees, so accepting another job presents no real problems for this coach. Ferraro will serve as the first base coach on the 1988 coaching staff, moving across the field after spending last season as the club's third base coach. Just another day at the office for Ferraro and his affiliation with the organization. He played two of his four major league seasons with the Yankees. Ferraro then showed what he could do as a manager in the Yankee farm system for five seasons (1974-78). He never had a losing season while posting an impressive 331-221 record (.600). His next role was that of a big league coach with the Yankees from 1979 to 1982. He served as manager of the Indians for part of the 1983 season, and two- and-a-half years as third base coach for the Royals before serving as interim manager for that club for the second half of the 1986 season. Ferraro rejoined the Yankees last season and is ready to continue his winning ways with the organization this year.

Clete Boyer

When Clete Boyer puts on the Pinstripes in 1988 as the Yankee third base coach, it will make for two familiar scenes. In the first he will be reunited with Billy Martin. In 1980 Martin took over as manager of the Oakland A's and one of his first moves was to make Boyer, who was a coach with the Atlanta Braves for three seasons, his third base coach. Boyer stayed with the A's in that capacity for six seasons, three under Martin. In the second scene Boyer will again be working in the vicinity of third base, where he excelled with the Yankees during eight (1959-66) of his nearly 15 seasons as a major leaguer. He became the Yankees regular third baseman in 1960, and played in five World Series with New York. His best season in Pinstripes came in 1962, when he batted .318 in helping lead the Yankees to a World Series victory.

Jeff Torborg

In 1979 Billy Martin became Yankees manager for the second time, taking over for Bob Lemon on July 19. One of his first moves was to make Jeff Torborg a member of the Yankee coaching staff. The many talents and attributes of Torborg that were recognized by Martin have since been appreciated by six other Yankee managers, keeping him in Pinstripes for over eight seasons, and making him the senior member on the staff. This quiet professional brings several looks to his job in the Yankee bullpen. In college he hit .537 his senior year for Rutgers, an NCAA record that still stands. He played for ten years in the majors as a catcher and was on a World Series Champion and NL pennant winner, caught three no-hitters, and two single season strikeout records. Couple these facts with his experience as a big league coach and manager, and you have a proven winner who has the ability to show what it takes to be a champion to today's Yankee relief corps.

Chris Chambliss

The Yankees are determined to get back on top in 1988, and are counting on a few familiar faces to get them there. Billy Martin ended the team's 12-year drought when he managed them to the AL pennant in 1976, and Chris Chambliss was a key player on that club. Martin has brought back Chambliss to once again help him make winners of the Yankees. Chambliss, who serves as the batting coach, played five of his nearly 16 major league seasons as a first baseman with the Yankees (1974-79). He was a prominent member of the Yankee clubs that dominated the late seventies. Chambliss' career was highlighted by a dramatic ninth-inning home run in the final game of the 1976 ALCS that beat the Royals and propelled the Yankees into the World Series for the first time since 1964. After his playing career ended in 1986, he rejoined the Yankees in the front office in July of 1987. Chambliss will now teach clutch hitting to the 1988 Yankees.

George Mitterwald

In May of 1969 Billy Martin took his first major league managing job with the Minnesota Twins. On that team was a promising young catcher named George Mitterwald, who helped Martin guide the Twins to the '69 playoffs. He no doubt made a lasting impression on his manager, who has now asked him to help lead the Yankees to the playoffs as a member of his coaching staff. Mitterwald played more than 10 years in the majors, with the Twins and Cubs, highlighted by two trips to the playoffs with the Twins (1969-70) where he posted a .333 average in ALCS play. He became a coach with the A's in 1979 (a player/coach for five days), and stayed on the staff as bullpen coach when Martin became manager in 1980. In 1981 he again aided Martin in steering the club to the playoffs. Mitterwald went on to manage the A's Modesto farm club for three seasons (1983-85), winning the California League Championship in 1984. For the past two years he managed the Twins Orlando farm team. Mitterwald dons the Pinstripes for the first time but is again reunited with Martin, a combination with a proven track record.

Pride and

THE 1988 YANKEES

A powerful lineup on paper, as Yankee fans learned in 1987, can be a fragile thing. The '87 Yankees began the year with supposedly the most potent lineup in baseball, and when the team disintegrated in the second half, naturally the thing that was suspect to begin with, the pitching, drew much of the blame.

What tended to be overlooked was the fact that not enough Yankees were touching home plate, something that shouldn't happen with Rickey Henderson, Don Mattingly, Dave Winfield, and Mike Pagliarulo in the order.

So how did it happen? Injuries, mostly. Damaged parts — parts that adversely affected other parts until the entire lineup concept came crashing down.

Forget pitching. The Yankees to win the American League East in 1988 need to improve their run production. They need to rank better than a league seventh in runs scored, their ranking in 1987.

Enter Jack Clark. When the National League's most dangerous hitter penned a two-year contract with New York in January, Yankees General Manager Lou Piniella called it "a signing the magnitude of Reggie Jackson's."

Clark will fill in defensively at first base, left-field and rightfield when needed, but he'll mostly DH, supplying much-needed righthanded power.

Jack Clark

Clark in 419 at-bats last year hit 35 home runs, had 106 RBI and drew a National League-leading 136 walks. He also led the league in slugging (.597) and on-base percentage (.459). Not a bad acquisition for the clean-up slot!

Manager Billy Martin in filling out the lineup card has several options. He has talked of batting Winfield second, or he could do the lefty-righty-lefty-righty thing with Mattingly-Clark-Pagliarulo-Winfield. But let's say he goes mostly with the following lineup:

1. Henderson, LF
2. Randolph, 2B
3. Mattingly, 1B
4. Clark, DH
5. Winfield, RF
6. Pagliarulo, 3B
7. Slaughter, C
8. Santana, SS
9. Kelly, CF

It is a batting order that should please Mattingly. Having Henderson and Willie Randolph ahead of him, he'll get his RBI opportunities. And with Clark and Winfield behind him, he should get good pitches.

Whatever the lineup, Clark will have far more protection than he had in St. Louis where he was basically the team's only power hitter. If Winfield and Pagliarulo are hitting, it'll be dangerous for opposing pitchers to walk Clark. He should see many good pitches, too.

The potential is there for a tremendous New York lineup. Not everyone has to have a career year but just about everyone has to stay reasonably healthy. Indeed, for this lineup to realize its great potential, the parts must not only remain in working order but must mesh together to form a unit stronger than their sum.

The Yankees can't afford a repeat of 1987 with Henderson down on June 4 with a pulled hamstring muscle and in and out of the lineup the rest of the year; with Mattingly missing three weeks in June with a back problem; and with Randolph on July 15 beginning a month on the disabled list with torn knee cartilage and playing sparingly for a couple of weeks after that.

In the disabled Randolph, the Yankees lost a player who was perhaps the league's second best lead-off man — the backup for Henderson. The attack couldn't survive the loss of both.

The 1987 problems ran on. Winfield struggled in Willie Randolph has been a key member of the Yankees' offense since 1976.

Mike Pagliarulo has shown the league that he's a bona fide power hitter. In 1987, he led the Yankees with 32 home runs.

With Jack Clark often hitting in front of Dave Winfield (above), the big rightfielder is sure to get his share of meaty pitches.

the second half, and with the top of the order weakened, finished with fewer than 100 RBI for the first time since the strike-shortened 1981 season. Gary Ward, a key first-half contributor whose bat seemingly grew "tired," slumped badly after the All-Star Break. Dan Pasqua, since traded, hit 17 home runs in 318 at bats, but he also fanned 99 times and batted only .233.

Offensively, catcher and shortstop were sub-par positions. Wayne Tolle-son, until he too went down with a shoulder ailment, played a solid shortstop, but with all their other offensive problems, the Yankees couldn't afford to start a player who on the year had only five extra-base hits in 349 trips.

The Yankees have

made changes at the weak positions. Off-season trades netted probable starters catcher Don Slaught and shortstop Rafael Santana.

A fourth new likely starter is the promising farm product, Roberto Kelly. He will be given every opportunity to win the centerfield job, allowing Henderson to move to his natural position, leftfield, where he's the best in the business. Kelly, who can really run, would not only help the club defensively, but his speed would be as big a plus to the Yankees' running game as Clark's muscle is to their power game.

Looking more closely at the 1988 Yankee lineup, consider first the only American Leaguer ever to hit 20-plus home runs while stealing 50-plus bases, doing it twice, in his first two Yankee seasons, 1985 and 1986. Rickey Henderson, batting leadoff, didn't reach either mark in 1987, hitting 17 homers and stealing 41 bases. And his most important stat, runs scored—146 in 1985—was only 78 in 1987.

Henderson's recent-seasons surge in power, cresting in 1986 at 28 home runs, has been a nice bonus, but what is of top priority is that he score runs. That means getting on base and lighting up the basepaths. His mere presence on the bases distracts—scares—pitchers.

A productive Henderson is critical to New York's 1988 fortunes.

Henderson needs healthy legs to play his game and the planned move to leftfield should help. Moreover, if there is one Yankee who should be happy to have Martin back, it is Henderson. Billy plays the kind of aggressive baseball that Henderson, who stole 130 bases for him at Oakland in 1982, thrives on.

Randolph, batting second. When he was in there—he played in 120 games and was the Yankees' outstanding player in the first half of 1987—Randolph was excellent. He had the fourth best on-base percentage in the American League (.411), set career highs in batting average (.305) and RBI (67), and scored Blasting home runs is a welcome by-product of Henderson's game, but he is most effective when he's causing trouble on the basepaths.

96 runs. He also hit .316 with runners in scoring position.

Randolph could have had a "career year" in 1987 if he had stayed healthy. With a little more rest, that kind of year may be possible in 1988.

Mattingly, batting third. On top of his back injury, Mattingly played much of 1987 with a sprained right wrist. Yet Don hit .327, with 30 home runs and 115 RBI. A superlative season!

Don entered the 1987 season generally regarded as the best all-around player in baseball. If there was one knock on Mattingly besides his less-than-outstanding running speed (which he can't improve), it was that he had made just one extra base hit in 47 career at-bats with the bases loaded.

So what did Mattingly do in 1987? He hit six grand slams to establish a new major league record. In fact, in 21 trips to the plate with the bases loaded, Mattingly went 9-for-19 (.474—6 home runs, 1 double, 2 singles, and 2 sacrifice flies) and drove in 33 runs.

Interestingly, Henderson and Randolph were both on base on four of the six occasions when Mattingly emptied the bases with a grand slam (and Randolph was on a fifth time). When Henderson and Randolph get on base, Mr. Mattingly is very dangerous.

Mattingly doesn't have much to prove. Except that he badly wants to play for a championship team. He has, in fact, guaranteed that New York will win the American League East title in 1988. A prerequisite for that to happen: players like Henderson and Randolph will have to set the table, and Mattingly will have to drive them home from the get-go. He was hitting only .239 after his first 29 games of 1987.

Clark, clean-up man. In the Total Average system developed by sportswriter Thomas Boswell—

As an individual, Don Mattingly has little left to prove. However, he badly wants to play for a championship Yankee team and he says the '88 club is the one to win.

TA is the ratio between the bases a player accumulates for his team and the outs he costs his team — Clark (1.258) in 1987 ranked first in all baseball. “Please, Jack,” wrote Boswell in the March 1988 issue of Inside Sports, “could you bat 600 times so another generation can see what Babe Ruth numbers — 50 homers, 150 RBI, 180 walks — look like.”

Still, possible pitfalls await Clark. He is, after all, coming to another league, with new pitchers, many of whom, unlike the National League’s, won’t challenge him as often with the fastball. Being a DH is a new experience for Clark as well.

Yankee Stadium is notoriously brutal on right-handed power hitters like Clark. But in 1987 he set a record at spacious Busch Stadium hitting 17 home runs there, and with another expansion of Monument Park in 1988, the leftfield wall at Yankee Stadium is being moved in about 15 feet, which will help.

Finally, why would a solitary guy like Clark willingly move to demanding New York City? “Actually,” says Clark, “I’m looking forward to bringing my act there and seeing if it turns anyone on outside the Midwest.”

Almost any Cardinal fan will tell you that if Clark hadn’t suffered a ligament tear in his right ankle on September 9, 1987, ending his season for all intents and purposes, the Cards, not the Twins, would have won the 1987 World Series.

Winfield, batting fifth. Winfield carried New York for part of 1987 and came into the All-Star Clark's arrival in the Bronx could mean another year of astronomical stats for the clean-up hitter. A new town and new stadium will not deter him.

Don Slaught

Game with 20 home runs and 68 RBI in 85 games. He was hardly a positive factor thereafter, however, hitting only seven home runs and driving in but 29 runs in 71 games (his failure to reach 100 RBI on the season was partially attributable to the losses of Henderson and Randolph). Yet his disappointing second half really diminished Dave's accomplishments which included a Gold Glove and a .351 average with men in scoring position.

Bigger things are expected from Winfield in 1988. At 36, he may need occasional rests, but Pagliarulo, batting sixth. Tough and hard working, Pagliarulo in his four-year Yankee career has improved each season in runs, hits, doubles, home runs and RBI.

the big guy has been amazingly durable, playing at least 140 games in each of the last six seasons. He could crank it up big one more time.

Pagliarulo, batting sixth. Tough and hardworking, Paglarulo in his four-year Yankee career has improved each season in runs, hits, doubles, home runs and RBI. With increasing playing time, he has made steady improvement. Now a vital cog in the Yankee machine, his 32 home runs last year led the club.

But for the lefthanded-hitting Pagliarulo to have a big numbers season, he will have to hit with more power against lefthanded pitching. Over the last two seasons, Pags has hit 54 home runs in 710 at-bats against righthanded pitching—a superlative total—but only six home runs in 315 at bats against lefties. He did raise his batting average 34 points against lefthanded pitching in 1987, however.

Slaught, batting seventh. Slaught could be the Yankees' best offensive catcher in some time. Although he had an off-year with Texas in 1987, he is a .270 lifetime hitter and in 1986 set a Texas club record for home runs by a catcher with 13. He could add some pop. "He's a tough kid and he will fit in nicely with our team," says Piniella.

Santana, batting eighth. Santana in 1987 raised his batting average 37 points (to .255), set new career highs in home runs (5), RBI (44) and runs (41). But he doesn't hit for power or enhance New York's running game (only two career stolen bases); his main role is to provide solid, Bucky Dent-style shortstopping.

In 1987, Rafael Santana set career highs in home runs, RBI and runs while hitting .255.

By taking the time to improve his game, Mike Pagliarulo has now become a vital cog in the Yankee machine.

Kelly, batting ninth. After stealing 51 bases (in 61 attempts at Columbus) to lead the International League, Roberto displayed his great speed in a 23-game look-see with New York in 1987.

Billy Martin likes Kelly in centerfield. It allows Henderson to shift to leftfield, forming a potentially best-in-the-game defensive outfield. Also, Kelly, batting ninth in front of Henderson, adds immensely to New York's running game.

It must be understood, however, that Kelly is still developing. His 13 home runs at Columbus constituted his first show of power, and he struck out 116 times in 118 games. But he has a great attitude. "I've never seen a player improve more than Roberto," said

Columbus Manager Bucky Dent, "and part of the reason is his willingness to listen."

Two holdovers from 1987, Gary Ward and Claudell Washington, could add sock to the lineup. The lefthanded-hitting Washington, a valuable fourth outfielder and a good all-round offensive player, could platoon with Kelly or handle the centerfield job if Kelly falters.

The Yankees also have a pair of power-hitting prospects. Jay Buhner hit 31 home runs last year to lead the International League. Orestes Destrade also had a fine year at Columbus (25 HRs, 81 RBI) and, like Buhner, finished in New York. Destrade is primarily a first baseman saddled with a guy named Mattingly in front of him.

The prospects, the bench strength and the bottom third of the order are all important, especially Kelly, but for the Yankees to put up eye-

Left-handed Claudell Washington has been quite successful filling in where he's needed.

Coming off the bench, Gary Ward provides experience and the ability to hit in the clutch.

Not many of the 1988 Yankees are going to match those batting averages. Even great hitters like Mattingly and Clark are unlikely to equal the numbers of Ruth and Gehrig. Yet Henderson-Randolph might be a better top two than Combs-Koenig. And Winfield-Pagliarulo might out-homer and out-RBI Meusel-Lazzeri.

But it is difficult to compare lineups of different eras. Staying with the present era, the 1987 Minnesota Twins, a team with a bloated team ERA of 4.63, won a World Championship with mediocre speed, a batting average one point lower than the Yankees' and a run total two runs less than the Yanks'. But they had four big guns: Kent Hrbek, (34 HRs, 90 RBI), Tom Brunansky (32 HRs, 85 RBI), Gary Gaetti (31 HRs, 109 RBI) and Kirby Puckett (28 HRs, 99 RBI). The Yankees now have four players who can match those numbers.

Actually, the Oakland A's may be the team to beat in run production in 1988. The addition of Dave Parker and Don Baylor, two aging lions, to a lineup already featuring Mark McGwire, Jose Conseco, Carney Lansford and Terry Steinbach, is ominous.

The Yankees should scare opposing pitchers in 1988. But what happens if Mattingly and Pagliarulo once more start slowly, if Clark needs time to adjust to new surroundings, if Henderson and Randolph again are ensnared by long-term injuries? A lineup is a fragile thing.

Despite the awesome talent around him, Mattingly is still the big gun in the Yankee lineup. If everything goes as planned, Don will again be an MVP candidate.

The 1982 pennant-winning Brewers possessed one of the most destructive lineups in recent times, led by Cecil Cooper, Gorman Thomas, Robin Yount, Ben Ogilvie, Ted Simmons and Paul Molitor. Then, in 1983, Ogilvie was suddenly over the hill, Yount and Molitor slipped a little more than slightly and Thomas started slowly and was traded. Burdened with offensive problems never envisioned, Milwaukee limped home in fifth place.

A lineup is a fragile thing. The Yankees will make it their strength in 1988.

THE WINNING LINEUP

THE 1988 YANKEES

Willie Randolph

30 SECOND BASEMAN

You hear all about the Mattinglys, Winfields and Hendersons, but the straw that has been stirring this drink for over a decade is Co-Captain Willie Randolph. Because of his quiet demeanor Randolph may not grab the headlines, but the people around him fully understand his value. "I would rate him at the top of the second basemen in all of baseball," boasted GM Lou Piniella. Consider that 1987 may have been the best season in Randolph's 12-year career. He adopted a more aggressive style at the plate and began the year at a torrid pace, finishing over .300 (.305) for the first time in his career. He had a career-high 67 RBI and equalled his previous high in homers with seven, and he stole 10 bases (he has 10 or more in each of his 12 full major league seasons) to move within six of the all-time Yankee mark. Randolph, despite the new power, maintained his good eye. He finished fourth in the league in on-base percentage, was ninth in walks, and was the starting second baseman in the All-Star game. Randolph's only improving with age.

Lee Guetterman

35 PITCHER

Not much was made of the winter trade that brought Lee Guetterman from Seattle to New York. What can you say? A 29-year-old lefty that has bounced around the Mariners organization since 1981, and has less than two years experience in the majors is no headliner, not yet at least. What is impressive is that he is improving, and could play a major role with the Yankees should that pattern continue through 1988. Guetterman started last year in Triple-A and joined the Mariners on May 21 without a major league win to his name (0-4). He got his first win in relief and his next four over five starts. His winning percentage (.733) was tied for first in the majors among pitchers with 15 or more decisions. He also had the Mariners lowest ERA (3.81) and third best record (11-4). And that's why he's a Yankee, Guetterman, who works as a starter and out of the pen, is one name that will become more familiar in 1988.

Roberto Kelly

39 OUTFIELDER

What a difference a year makes. At this time last year not many Yankee fans could have told you who Roberto Kelly was. Now everybody's talking about the exciting young outfielder. The Yankees spent the off-season telling a host of interested clubs that the Panama native was untouchable. Kelly now has a better than average chance of becoming the starting centerfielder. Roberto joined the organization in 1982, and patiently made his way through the system. He made two trips to New York in 1987 and, with the injuries to Rickey Henderson, saw action in 23 games. He made the most of his opportunities, looking impressive in his first shot with the big club. Kelly showed great speed both in the field and on the bases, while showing promise at the plate. At age 23 his time may have come. Roberto Kelly could find himself roving in Death Valley this season.

Rafael Santana

17 SHORTSTOP

Baseball fundamentalists never underestimate the importance for any team with playoff aspirations to be strong up the middle. The last time the Yankees made it to post-season play was in 1981, and it is no coincidence that they have had shortstop problems ever since. For the first time in a decade the position seems to be secured. The first-ever trade of major league players between New York's two baseball teams brought former Met Rafael Santana to the Bronx. A solid defender, Santana was a vital force in the Mets' 1986 drive to the world championship. Yet, after three seasons as a starter, the native of the Dominican Republic fell victim to a youth movement in Queens. Still young at age 30, he will try to solidify a hole that the Yankees have been unable to fill since the departure of Bucky Dent. Santana is steady in the field and is an improving hitter, finishing last year at .255. The arrival of Santana came without much fanfare, but he could prove to be the Yankees' most beneficial acquisition. "I'm very happy to be with the Yankees," Rafael says. "I don't have to move out of New York, and I'm still playing for a team capable of winning."

EXCEEDS THE NEED

Don Mattingly

23 FIRST BASEMAN

“We’re going to win the East. I guarantee it,” declared the normally softspoken Don Mattingly last winter. By normal standards it would be a bold statement, except when you consider what the Indiana native has already accomplished in just over four seasons. What more can be said about Mattingly, a superstar at age 26? Last year he again took his customary spot among the league leaders in nearly every offensive category. With the bat he set a new major league record with six grand slams in a season. He broke the AL record of hitting home runs in six straight games, and went on to tie the ML record by stroking a dinger in eight consecutive games. With the glove he tied another ML record for first basemen with 22 putouts in a nine-inning game. In fact he made only five errors all year! In his career he’s already got a batting title and the MVP Award to his name. So what’s next? Just ask him. “We’ve got the best club out there, and this year we’re going to win it.” Bragging? Not for Don Mattingly, arguably the best player in the game today, and a player who has the ability to back up what he says.

Don Slaught

11 CATCHER

There were a few holes in the otherwise strong Yankee team last year, holes that had to be filled for the club to win in 1988. One of those trouble spots was remedied when an off-season trade with the Rangers brought five-year veteran catcher Don Slaught to New York. Coming off a devastating injury in 1986, Slaught suffered through a bad start with Texas last year. The club felt it was due to his injury and therefore limited his playing time. Don finished with his worst season in the big leagues. Many still remember the incident in May 1986 when Slaught was drilled in the face with an Oil Can Boyd fastball, breaking his nose and left cheekbone. At the time the catcher was having an excellent season and went on to set a career-high in RBI with 46, as well as setting a Texas record for catchers with 13 home runs. When the Rangers gave up on him the Yankees were only too happy to take him, hoping that he will return to his 1986 form. Despite his poor showing last year Slaught is still a career .270 hitter. "I'm very happy about coming to the Yankees," he says. "It's a good opportunity for me, and I'm looking forward to getting more playing time."

Tim Stoddard

43 PITCHER

He dropped 30 pounds before the season, then took a lot of weight off of the Yankee bullpen. Tim Stoddard didn't have a defined role last year, but by the end of 1987 the big righthander had established himself as one of the more vital members on the Yankees pitching staff. Stoddard, maybe the team's most underrated player in 1987, became the Yankees' number one right-handed reliever. Not only did he serve as a set-up man, but he was also used as a stopper. It was just like old times for Stoddard, who registered 26 saves as the Orioles' closer in 1980. Since 1984 he had been used primarily as a middle man. His eight saves last season are eight more than he had in 1986, and the most since he registered nine saves with the O's in 1983.

He had one blown save all year while preventing 42 of the 54 runners he inherited from scoring. "As long as I get to pitch, that's all I want to do," Stoddard said. "All I want to do is get the ball." Whether as a closer or a set-up man, the 6-7 Stoddard has become a big part of the Yankees bullpen.

Rich Dotson

36 PITCHER

It was a long time coming, with talks going back to last summer, but a November trade with the White Sox finally made Rich Dotson a Yankee. It was a move that not only helped ease the team's pitching woes, but at the same time moved the Yankees that much closer to a pennant. Dotson is just what the Yankees need to complement their potent offense. The eight-year veteran is a proven quality starter, who provides the staff with much needed consistency. In 1987 he reached the double figure mark in wins (11-12) for the sixth time in his seven full seasons. You can add 100 or more strikeouts in each of those six years. Dotson underwent surgery for what was considered a career threatening circulatory problem near the right shoulder in 1985. He returned in 1986 and was the only Chisox pitcher not to miss a start. Not the hard thrower he was in 1983 when his 22-7 record helped lead the Sox to the AL West title, the experienced righthander has made the needed adjustments. His strikeouts and innings pitched last year were the third highest single-season totals of his career. Dotson will be looked upon to continue his consistency as he will no doubt play a major role in the Yankees' 1988 pennant drive.

Jack Clark

21 DESIGNATED HITTER

He'll still be a beast in the east, only now Jack the Ripper will be housed in the Bronx. In a move that made all New York baseball fans happy, the Yankees went out and signed one of the most feared right-handed sluggers in the game, Jack Clark. "In the past we've signed free agents Goose Gossage, Catfish Hunter, Reggie Jackson and Dave Winfield, and now we put Clark in that tradition," praised GM Lou Piniella. "He's the type of player we want in New York." No question about it. Clark will provide some much needed muscle from the right side, while adding power to a team already regarded as one of the most explosive in baseball. Consider that Clark almost single-handedly carried the Cardinals to the NL pennant last year. The Cards averaged 5.3 runs per game with Clark and only 3.6 without him, with eight of his 15 GWRBI coming on home runs. Imagine what he can do in the heart of the Yankee line-up? Not to mention how he'll protect the other hitters. And if Clark can stay healthy, he could prove to be an adequate replacement in the outfield and at first base. "I'm excited and thrilled to be in New York," he says, "and now I'm looking forward to a championship season."

Our best wishes to the 1988 New York Yankees. When the ball doesn't always fly your way, keep the faith. And refer the umps to us.

Joel Skinner

12 CATCHER

"I don't feel good at all about last season, I didn't do anything to contribute," lamented Joel Skinner. It was a harsh reality for the young man, considered the catcher of the future after coming to the Yankees in a July 1986 trade with the White Sox. Skinner is a highly regarded defensive catcher, who has a strong arm and calls a good game. His shortcoming has proven to be his bat. He was never expected to tear the cover off the ball, but his slow start in 1987 fell below acceptable standards. After showing promise at the plate after coming over from Chicago, Skinner became the Yankees' starting catcher last year and even hit his first career grand slam in April, only to be outrighted to Columbus in June with a .237 average. "I haven't taken advantage of the opportunities I have had," Skinner says. "You have to play well to be in the line up." In 1988, he'll get another shot.

Dave Righetti

19 PITCHER

Nobody's perfect, not even Dave Righetti. The Yankee stopper took some heat of his own, unjustly, when he got off to a slow start last year. In 1986 he was nearly flawless in posting a major league record 46 saves. Pitching in the shadows of that record Rags came under heavy scrutiny. No, he didn't have the same type of year in 1987 but that's why they call them records, they are rare achievements. Take away the enigma of the record and you'll see that Righetti once again showed why he is considered one of the top relievers in the game. He won his second consecutive Rolaids Relief Man Award, finishing tied for second in the league with 31 saves. His 31 saves equals his 1984 total for the fourth best on the Yankee single-season list.

Combined with his eight wins, Righetti had a hand in 39 of the team's 89 wins (43.8 per cent). And it was an off year? Since moving to the bullpen in 1984 he has averaged over 34 saves a season, and his 138 saves in only four years places him 13th on the all-time list. With four saves in 1988 he will pass Sparky Lyle to move into second place on the all-time Yankee list. As Righetti says, "Everybody has his good days and bad days. The reason I am a good pitcher is because I don't have many bad days."

Gary Ward

22 OUTFIELDER

In his first season with the Yankees Gary Ward began the year doing exactly what he was hired to do. When he was signed as a free agent his job was to provide New York's lineup with some badly needed punch from the right side. Ward got off to a fast start, hitting .301 with seven homers and 37 RBI at the end of May. From then on his numbers soured, as he struggled to get back on track. It never happened. Ward was down to .266 at the All-Star break. After a dismal .218 BA in the second half, he finished the year with a disappointing .248. The cool veteran hitter did, however, continue to show that he could hit under pressure. Ward finished second on the club with 11 game-winning RBI, a new career high, and went 8-for-12 with five RBI as a pinch-hitter.

Rick Cerone

6 CATCHER

Last year was the second time in his career that Rick Cerone was asked to step up and take over as starting catcher of the Yankees. In 1980 he had the unenviable task of replacing legend Thurman Munson, and responded well enough to finish seventh in the AL MVP voting that year. The circumstances were different for Cerone in 1987. He made the club in spring training as a backup catcher, and by June he got the call as a starter. The veteran proved to be an adequate replacement, appearing in 113 games with 85 starts behind the plate, his highest total since 1980. He also led all AL catchers in fielding percentage. Cerone showed some versatility by making his first and only career appearance at first base, as a defensive replacement, and also made his first two career appearances as a relief pitcher. Working the other end of the battery for one inning in each of two Yankee blowouts, he retired six of the seven batters he faced, allowing no runs or hits, with a walk and a strikeout!

The Greatest Comeback Ever

This year the Yankees celebrate the 10th anniversary of their 1978 World Championship team. Nineteen-seventy-eight was a season full of great athletic accomplishment for the Yankees, but it was also a time of controversy and intrigue. All of the excitement produced one of the most fascinating teams and seasons of all-time.

BY CHARLES J. ALFARO

1978 YANKEE ARTWORK BY STEVE LOWERY

In the 1980s, what can be termed the decade of parity in professional sports, the ultimate achievement has become winning two consecutive championships. Pro basketball has gone nearly 20 years without a repeat champion, since the Boston Celtics' titles in 1968 and 1969. The Pittsburgh Steelers in 1974 and '75 were the last NFL team to master the feat. In baseball it has now been a decade since one team has won the World Series two straight years.

This season marks the 10th anniversary of the 1978 New York Yankees. Their World Series victory, on the heels of a New York win in the 1977 Fall Classic, made it two consecutive titles for the Yankees.

The back-to-back championships which culminated with the 1978 season were the high point of the Yankees' most recent dynasty. From 1976 through 1981 the Yankees were the beasts of the East, winning the Eastern Division five times while capturing four American League pennants.

The 1978 season will forever have its place in baseball history. It was more than just a year of champions, much more. The fact that the Yankees reached the pinnacle in term accomplishments was only part of the story.

As prolific as this squad was between the lines, so too were they unmatched off the field. In fact, their numerous baseball accomplishments, many of which are still recorded in the annals of baseball history, were mirrored by the seemingly unending controversy that surrounded these Yankees. Sport fans marvelled at the Yankees' athletic ability while the rest were treated to a show that would have made the Ringling Brothers proud.

This rare combination of sport and spectacle made the 1978 Yankees one of the most intriguing teams in sports history.

From day one the 1978 season was a reporter's fantasy. The Yankees may have generated more headlines in that one season than the Seattle Mariners have been able to produce during their 11 years in baseball! The storybook comeback culminated with Bucky Dent's shot heard round Fenway Park, but that paced by a pitcher called "Louisiana Lightning."

The headlines actually started during the off-season when the World Champs improved their chances of repeating with the signing of free agent Rich Gossage. In '78 the Goose won the AL Fireman of the year Award as he combined with 1977 Cy Young winner Sparky Lyle to give the Yankees an awesome left-right combination out of the bullpen.

The starting rotation was led by phenom Ron Guidry, who posted one of the greatest seasons ever imaginable for a big league pitcher. Other members of the strong staff included Ed Figueora, Jim "Catfish" Hunter, Don Gullett, Dick Tidrow and youngster Jim Beattie.

Offensively the Yankees were as strong as any team in baseball. These Yankees were a group of steady, consistent players, led by Captain Thurman Munson. The rest of the lineup featured names like Reggie Jackson, Graig Nettles, Lou Piniella, Roy White, Mickey Rivers, Bucky Dent and Willie Randolph.

The Yankees, with their wide array of talent, went into the season expected to repeat as champions and understandably so. It was a team that had no glaring weaknesses. On offense the power came from Jackson and Nettles, both of whom led the team with 27 homers apiece. Piniella led the team with a .314 average. In the field the Yankees were the second best defensive team in the league with cornermen Nettles and Chambliss winning Gold Glove awards. The Yankees led the AL in pitching with Gossage and Lyle combining to also give them a league-leading 36 saves.

Maybe the most important quality of this team was their depth. Players like Piniella, White, Fred Stanley, Paul Blair and Brian Doyle came off the bench to become vital members to the Yankees' success.

Despite starting the year with a 1-4 road trip, the mood was still a festive one for the home opener. Roger Maris returned to the Stadium for the first time since being traded to the Cardinals in 1966 and, together with another Yankee legend, Mickey Mantle, helped raise the 1977

World Championship banner up the centerfield flagpole.

Maris, who in 1961 set a major league record by hitting 61 home runs in a season, was then treated to a first-inning dinger by Jackson. The fans responded by showering the field with "Reggie Bars," which had been handed out before the game. Guidry got the win in this exciting Opening Day. It would prove to be the first of 13 straight wins for Gator.

However, jubilation quickly soured as injuries and internal squabbling began to take their toll on the team. When Gullett was placed on the disabled list in early April, it was an omen of things to come.

Reggie Jackson

Nearly all of the pitchers except Guidry were injured at one time or another and every starter except for Chambliss was out of the lineup for at least a week. On top of that was the inner feuding that eventually led to a July managerial change.

"It was a crazy year," remembers veteran sportswriter Moss Klein, who has been covering the Yankees since 1976. "The 1977 controversy paled compared to what went on in '78. It just got out of control, but the players seemed to get used to it. I think that the injuries played a bigger role in their falling behind early. When the team got healthy they started to win."

Cy Young winner Ron Guidry was clearly the hero of the 1978 campaign.

Goose Gossage

"There was a lot of pressure on us early, because everyone expected us to repeat," added shortstop Bucky Dent, now a manager with the Yankees' Triple-A affiliate in Columbus. "There were so many injuries that we fell behind early."

Throughout the first two months of the season the Yankees seemed to have battled past all of the adversities. With gutsy performances by fill-ins like pitcher Jim Beattie and catcher Mike Heath the Yankees were a respectable 29-17 at the end of May, trailing the Red Sox by only three games. Then the roof fell in and apparently landed on the clubhouse. April showers turned into a full fledged storm in June.

The month of June started what would become a nearly two-month Yankee nightmare. The Yankees would lose Dent, Randolph and Rivers to injuries. The pitching corps looked more like the walking wounded. Hunter was disabled, Gullett got his last win on the final day in June and was eventually out for the year, and on July 1 Andy Messersmith made his final appearance of the season. The Yankees went 14-15 in June and fell to third place, one game behind Milwaukee and nine behind Boston.

New York, in light of everything that happened, was actually fortunate to be in the position they were in. Believe it or not but things could have been worse, a lot worse. Guidry proved to be a savior in Pinstripes. At 5-11 and 160 pounds, he was a little man with a lot of heart. His endless list of '78 accomplishments included leading the majors in wins (25-3), ERA (1.74), winning percentage (.893—the highest in baseball history by a 20-game winner), and shutouts (9).

He was New York's original Dr. K, striking out 10 or more batters in eight games. This included a dazzling 18-strikeout performance against California on June 17, a Yankee record and at the time an AL record for a nine-inning game.

"Everyone remembers 1978 for Bucky Dent's home run, but the great comeback from 14 games back wouldn't have been possible without Ron Guidry," remembers veteran broadcaster and former Yankee great Phil Rizzuto. "He was great all year and especially that game where he struck out 18 Angels. He was throwing hard, and if they fouled one off it was a miracle. It was very exciting."

Even more impressive than the strikeouts was Gator's consistency. After winning 13 straight to start the year Guidry won 12 of his last 14 regular season decisions, including seven shutouts. Maybe the most important stat of the season was that 15 of Guidry's 25 wins came after a loss, the biggest being the divisional playoff win over Boston. His win in the World Series also came after two losses. His efforts made him unanimous choice for the Cy Young Award and, with all due respect to Jim Rice's awesome season, he deserved to be the league's MVP as well.

"I had the great year, but nobody else really got off to a good start," said

Injuries took a severe toll on the Yankees. Here centerfielder Mickey Rivers (17) is helped off the field.

Guidry, who would go on to be the ace of the staff for the next decade and become a Yankee co-captain in 1986. "Figgy struggled, Catfish and others were hurt so we brought up young kids like Beattie. Towards the middle of the season we started getting healthy and playing good ball."

Before that day came the team slipped into complete chaos. On July 5 the Yankees went on a disastrous 2-8 skid, ending with the July 17 loss which dropped them 14 games behind Boston. In that game Jackson disobeyed Martin's bunt signal, resulting in his indefinite suspension for insubordination. Jackson's suspension was for five days. The Yankees, interestingly enough, won all five games to start the second half of the season, cutting the Sox lead to 10.

Ironically, when things finally looked to be going their way, the streak ended when Martin resigned as the manager. Upset by Jackson's return, the fiery manager spoke out following a July 23 win. During a tearful and emotional announcement, Martin soon resigned as Yankee manager.

Despite his resignation Martin later maintained, "That was still my team that won the championship in 1978. I had them for the two years before, I took them through spring training, and I managed them that year for over 100 games. I'd say that made it my team."

"We faced turmoil and controversy throughout the year," recalls Randolph. "It was unsettling at times, but we got used to it. It didn't affect us on the field. When we went out on the field we did what we had to do, when we had to do it."

And that they did. Following a July 24 loss with third base coach Dick Howser serving as interim manager, the Yankees announced Hall-of-Famer Bob Lemon as their new manager. On July 29, Old Timers Day at Yankee Stadium, public address announcer Bob Sheppard introduced one guest by calling him the Yankee manager in 1980 and many seasons thereafter, Billy Martin. The former and next Yankee manager trotted on to the field to a seven-minute standing ovation.

"That was a big thrill for me, I was very happy," remembers Martin. "It was the proudest moment in my life."

Interestingly enough, Martin would never see the 1980 season in

Thurman Munson

"To be honest with you, I don't think we felt we were going to catch Boston. We just wanted to show that we had character and that we were going to make a run at them."

Pinstripes, but was instead manager of the Oakland A's. He replaced Lemon as manager in July 1979 but was dismissed during the off-season for punching a marshmallow salesman. In 1988, 10 years after leaving the Yankees for the first time, Martin returns for a record fifth time as Yankee manager.

In the meantime, under Lemon, the Yankees continued to win and closed the gap to 7½ games. As July came to a close, the Yankees had picked up 6½ games on Boston in 11 playing dates.

"Not to take anything away from Bob Lemon, but I think once the team was healthy they could have won with Billy," said Klein. "Lemon was more reserved and that did make a difference, but I think it was just a matter of them getting over the injuries."

The Yankee express was sidetracked a bit after dropping a pair of games to the visiting Sox in early August, leaving them 8½ back. They came into the month 6½ back, and were still 6½ back heading into September. But August was hardly a dull month.

August featured two games in Baltimore that still stand out in Yankee history. On the 12th the lights went out three times in a tough Yankee loss. The next day the team dropped a tough decision when after rallying from three runs down to take a 5-3 lead in the top of the seventh, rains forced the game to be called and the Orioles escaped with a 3-0 win. The Yankees argued that the field would have been in playing condition had the groundscrew wanted to repair it. They lost the argument and the game.

More importantly, despite not gaining any ground, the Yankees seemed ready to make a move. Randolph, Dent, Rivers and Hunter were back, and the team was finally healthy again. With these key players back in action, the Yankees were again playing quality baseball. They finally resembled the team that had won the World Championship in 1977, and looked determined to defend that title.

"Now we were playing with all of our horses and Boston started going through the injuries," Guidry said recently. "The mood was we could either pack it in or we could make a run at them. To be honest with you, I don't think we felt we were going to catch Boston. We just wanted to show that we had character and that we were going to make a run at them."

"It started more out of pride, but as we got closer it snowballed," agreed

Dent. "I had never seen a group of guys with that kind of determination"

"As the lead dropped drastically we got even more motivated," continued Gator. "We knew we were going to play them seven more times and we had a shot at it."

By the time the two AL East rivals squared off in Fenway, the Yankees had cut the lead to just four games. Going into Boston the team's confidence was soaring. Klein remembers the plane ride north when Dent told him the Yankees would sweep the four crucial contests. "I told him that realistically they would be happy to split or win three," said Klein, "but he shook his head and said, 'No, they're ready to fall. We're gonna sweep.'"

Jackson would later say, "It's hard to explain, but somehow we seemed to believe we would win up there. We knew it wouldn't be easy, but there was something in the air that made everyone even more confident."

Catfish Hunter

What started as a showdown soon became known as the Boston Massacre. The Yankees, as Dent had predicted, swept the Red Sox. It was what all parties now refer to as the turning point of the season. With incredible scores of 15-3, 13-2, 7-0, and 7-4, the Yankees had turned around the whole perspective of the pennant race. The Yankees left Beantown in a first place tie on paper, but had clearly established themselves as the leaders. The Red Sox became the chasers.

The following week the two teams squared off again. This time in New York, and this time with the Yankees up by a game and a half. The Bombers took the first two to make it six straight over their number one nemesis. However, Boston escaped with a win, leaving town 2½ back.

The Red Sox didn't fold. Somehow they managed to pick themselves up, and went on to win 12 of their last 14 games including their last eight in a row. The race went down to the wire. On what could have been the last day of the regular season Boston won while the Yankees dropped a tough one to the Indians, setting the stage for what many have called the greatest game in baseball history.

It all came down to this! One game in Fenway Park to decide the 1978 AL East Champion. And it was a game that lived up to its expectations. There was tension, excitement, great plays, heroes and more headlines.

Guidry started for New York, but was being outdueled by former teammate Mike Torrez. Through six Torrez held the Yankees to a pair of hits and the Sox held a 2-0 lead going into the seventh.

Then came the unthinkable. Two men on, two out and Dent at the plate. He fouled the second Torrez pitch off his left ankle, got a new bat from the batboy courtesy of Rivers and shook off the pain. Moments later he became a hero by knocking the ball into the screen over the left-field wall for a dramatic three-run homerun.

"I'll never forget that day," Dent fondly recalls. "Everyone was very business-like, very serious, you could feel it in the air. Then, of course, I hit the big home run for us. It was the biggest moment of my career. It was very exciting for all of us."

Lou Piniella

But the game was far from over. The final two innings contained as much drama as a classic novel. The Yankees added another run on a Munson RBI double and extended the lead to 5-2 on an eighth-inning Jackson homer. To this day that game is remembered for Dent's clutch clout, but Mr. October's blast would prove to be the difference for the Yankees.

The Sox cut the lead to 5-4 on an eighth-inning RBI single by their captain and leader, Carl Yastrzemski, who had already homered. The game went to the ninth with Boston trailing by one. With Rick Burleson on first and one out, Jerry Remy lined a shot to right, and Piniella lost it in the sun. The ball landed and skipped to his left when suddenly Piniella reached out blindly to make what could have been a season-saving stop. Piniella's quick reflexes held Remy to a single instead of what could have been a triple. More importantly, he kept Burleson at second. Had he advanced to third he would have scored on the next play, a Rice fly to deep right.

With two out and two on, the game hinged on one of baseball's most classic confrontations. The Goose vs. Yaz for all the marbles. Gossage won the battle and the Yankees won the war, when Yaz's wicked cut at Goose's second offering resulted in a routine foul pop. The sight of Nettles settling under the ball and tightly securing the last out will forever be a part of Yankee highlight films. It was the culmination of one of the greatest comebacks baseball had ever seen.

In July they were a team that was hurt, in complete disarray, and 14 games back. In October they were champions of the East for the third straight year.

"There was a newspaper strike that year, and I still maintain that that had a lot to do with our coming back," said Randolph. "That helped us a lot because the guys didn't have to read about all the complaining in the papers. There were no reporters in the clubhouse, and that's when we really came together as a team. It was a gutsy performance by everyone as we overcame the injuries, Boston and the turmoil to win another championship."

"After we fell 14 games behind everyone in baseball wrote us off," remembers Piniella. "There were a lot of distractions but we were professionals."

There was still more to come in this this exciting season. While it seemed almost anti-climactic, there was still a series to be played for the pennant. The Yankees met the Kansas City Royals for the third straight time, the previous two going to the final game. After exchanging routs in Kansas City the series moved to New York, where the Yankees took two straight to win the pennant. Jackson and Munson both had an excellent series, with White hitting the clinching home run for a 2-1 win in the decisive fourth game.

In that game Guidry got the win, putting the pitching rotation out of sink heading into the World Series vs. the Dodgers. On top of that, Randolph was out, Rivers was hurt, Chambliss and Guidry were said to be tired, and the Dodgers were actually favored to win.

The Dodgers took the first two games in Los Angeles, and looked as though they would avenge their loss to the Yankees in the '77 Series. But this seemed to be a year of destiny for New York. Time and time they had overcome adversity throughout the season. This time would be no different.

Ace in the hole Guidry took the mound for Game Three. But on this night he didn't have it. Nettles stole the show with four game-saving plays at third base. The inspired Yankee offense came alive and Guidry hung on to get the win.

The fourth game will be remembered for the no interference call when Jackson was hit by the relay from second to first on an attempted doubleplay. A run scored, the Dodgers protested and the Yankees won their second straight.

The next game proved to be a 12-2 rout, and the Yankees were on their way. The two teams traveled back to LA where the onslaught continued.

The only question in Game Six was the final score. Answer: 7-2, and the Yankees added their 22nd championship. They fought off all odds to win their second consecutive championship.

"That was the most exciting season I was involved in as a player," said Piniella, who continued up the company ladder by going from player to coach to manager to GM in 1988. "We were the defending World Champions and we were determined to repeat. After we lost the first two, we came back to win the next four in a row, and that had never been done before. It had been a long time since a team won back-to-back World Titles and it hasn't been done since."

What more can you say? A season filled with an endless list of memories, highlights, excitement, adversity and success. There were the headlines, the fights, the injuries, and the heroes, all making the 1978 season maybe the most enigmatic year in baseball history.

That is why 10 years later we honor these players. More than anything else, they were winners. They earned their spot in baseball history by overcoming seemingly insurmountable odds, on their way to defending their title and by becoming the 1978 World Champions.

Rickey Henderson

24 OUTFIELDER

Disappointment. That's the word that best describes Rickey Henderson's third year in Pinstripes. What started out as an MVP kind of season instead will be remembered as the year of the "hammy." As Henderson goes so go the Yankees, and when a bad wheel slowed down the speedstar so too went the club's hopes for a divisional title. The Man of Steal got off to the best start of his career, pacing the Yankees to their best start since 1976. Before leaving the game on June 4 with a pulled right hamstring, he was hitting .324 with 10 homers, 18 RBI, and 23 stolen bases. He was an early MVP favorite, but it wasn't to be. The pulled hamstring, the first major injury of his career, put him on the DL twice and forced him to miss 55 games. Not only did the Yankees go 29-26 during those games, but Henderson lost the stolen base crown for the first time in his career after owning the title for seven straight years. On the positive side Henderson broke the AL record of 28 career lead-off homers and is one shy of the ML record of 35. In 1987 he also became the youngest player ever to steal 700 bases. Rickey's 1988 "comeback" should ignite the Yankees once again.

Pat Clements

38 PITCHER

When he was good he was really good and when he was bad . . . So went Pat Clements' 1987 campaign.

There was seemingly no middle ground in his first year with the Yankees, after being acquired in the Rhoden trade with Pittsburgh. It was an inconsistent year for Clements, who struggled with his mechanics. He made the club after an impressive spring, but was optioned to Columbus in May. When he returned to the Yankees in June he was unstoppable, giving up only one earned run in 11 appearances. But from July 11 to Aug. 1 he gave up 13 runs in 10 innings, and was again sent to Columbus. He was recalled eight days later and, despite struggling, finished the year with respectable totals. Clements is a durable lefty, who can pitch long or short relief, and could also be a starter. This durability, along with a wicked sinker, will give the 26-year-old a look in 1988.

Ron Guidry

49 PITCHER

Something was missing in April 1987. For the first time in over a decade the Yankees were without their pitching ace, Ron Guidry. Gator re-signed as a free agent on May 1, and started the year with two appearances in Florida and one in Columbus before joining the Yankees on May 24. This early struggle would be indicative of Guidry's season. His first five outings with New York were out of the bullpen and he didn't make his first start until June 9. Just when he looked to be the Guidry of old he battled a combination of little offensive support, terrible first innings and a tender left elbow that ended his season on September 5. However, there were signs that "Louisiana Lightning" was back, despite his second straight sub .500 season (5-8). He allowed two runs or less in 11 of his 17 starts, had five no-decisions where he pitched well enough to win, and had a 14-strikeout game. After off-season elbow surgery Guidry, who ranks in the top 10 in most of the team's all-time pitching categories, is ready to assume his position as Co-Captain and team leader. "I pitched some good games that my record didn't show, in what was more or less a salvaged year," Gator says. "Now I'm looking forward to this year."

Claudell Washington

18 OUTFIELDER

Just as it was for many of his Yankee teammates, 1987 proved to be a year of "what ifs" for Claudell Washington. After getting off to a tremendous start, Washington spent the better part of the year fighting off nagging injuries. He came to the Yankees in June 1986 as a backup outfielder, and played that role to perfection. Last year he was hitting an incredible .348 and had made several acrobatic catches in Death Valley before going on the DL May 18 after pulling a left groin muscle. That was the beginning of the end for Washington. No sooner did he return from that injury when, on June 10, he left a game with a pulled left hamstring and was out for 10 more days. On September 22 he left a game with a sore right hamstring, and this time was out for the season. Washington still finished the year hitting a solid .279. If he can stay healthy this versatile veteran of 14 major league seasons figures to be an important figure on the 1988 Yankee team.

John Candelaria

45 PITCHER

Who can be a starter? The Candy Man can, and that's why John Candelaria will be pitching in the Bronx this year. After being traded to the Mets from California last September, Candelaria couldn't come to terms in a new contract with his former employer. Despite his badly wanting to stay and pitch in New York, the Mets wanted to use the big left-hander in long relief while he maintained that he can still be an effective starter. The Yankees agreed and signed Candelaria as a free agent. The signing was part of the continued effort to bolster the team's pitching corps. Candelaria has been a consistent winner throughout his 12-plus years in the majors. Last season alone he was 10-6. Since 1976 he has reached the double figure mark in wins in nine of his 10 full seasons (he was on the DL for most of the 1981 season), and finished with nine victories the other year. In 1986 he underwent surgery on his left elbow, and was named AL Comeback Player of the Year as he posted a record of 10-2. Last season he was 8-6 with California and 2-0 with the Mets. "I feel I have some quality years as a starter, and here I'll have that opportunity," Candelaria explains. "If I fail, it's my fault." The Yankees don't expect failure. They're counting on only sweet things from the Candy Man.

Wayne Tolleson

2 INFIELDER

At 5-9 and 160 pounds, Wayne Tolleson is a little guy with big aspirations. Tolleson came to the Yankees in July 1986, a hopeful solution to their shortstop problems. He got off to a fast start in Pinstripes that year, and began the 1987 campaign as the team's starting shortstop. But the troubles that have seemingly haunted the Yankees in that position for the past decade continued. Hitting as high as .270 late in May and playing stellar defense, Tolleson looked to be the cure at short until suffering an injury to his right shoulder. He struggled through the second half of the season, including a 15-day stint on the DL, and underwent arthroscopic surgery on the shoulder last December. Tolleson has now recovered and is looking forward to this season. In the past he has played shortstop, second and third for the Yankees, and the little guy is again looking to help the club in a big way in 1988.

Dave Winfield

31 OUTFIELDER

When the tough get hurt, the others have to keep it going. Such is life in a 162-game schedule. With superstars Don Mattingly and Rickey Henderson out at the same time for 23 games, the fate of the Yankees became the responsibility of another superstar, Dave Winfield. At 6-6 and 220 pounds, Winfield carried the team on his shoulders by hitting .352 with seven homers and 25 RBI over the stretch. Day in and day out, the Yankees looked to Dave and he appeared in all but six games—his most in Pinstripes. The pace took its toll, and even this thoroughbred tired. He fell just three RBI short of the 100-plateau for the first time in six years, and his .295 average at the all-star break dropped to a still impressive .275 for the season. Just another Winfield type of year. Each year he does it all; hit, throw, and run. And seemingly it goes unnoticed, as great things have come to be expected from a man with such athletic ability. The consistency has added up for Dave Winfield over the years, and in 1988 look for him to break the top 15 on the Yankees all-time RBI list and move into the 10th spot on the all-time Yankee leader board for home runs.

Cecilio Guante

51 PITCHER

The 1987 campaign looked very promising for Cecilio Guante, who came to the Yankees in a November 1986 trade with the Pirates. His tender right shoulder forced him on the disabled twice and his season ended in early July. The hard-throwing reliever had an excellent spring and started his first year in Pinstripes as the all-important set-up man for Dave Righetti. Then came the injury after only 16 games, and the season was really over before it got started. In his brief stints with the team, the native of the Dominican Republic showed promise for 1988. Guante prevented 15 of 20 runners he inherited from scoring, while striking out an impressive 46 batters in only 44 innings. Project those numbers out over an entire season, and you'll understand why the Yankees are expecting Cecilio Guante to make a contribution out of the bullpen.

Rick Rhoden

26 PITCHER

The Yankees were looking to ease their pitching problems when they traded for veteran pitcher Rick Rhoden in December 1986. Having gone 15-12 with the lowly Pirates the previous year, Rhoden was expected to become the Yankees' number one pitcher in 1987. That's exactly what he did. After nearly 12 seasons in the NL, Rhoden came to New York and led the teams in wins (16-10), equalling his career high. Even more impressive was his consistency. Rhoden is one of only eight major leaguers to have won 10 or more games in each of the last six seasons (1987 being the ninth time in his career). It was also his sixth straight season with 100 or more strikeouts. And still, 1987 could be called a disappointment for the right-hander after two freak injuries. In March he was injured after slipping on the mound during an exhibition game, and after admittedly "surviving" the first month of the season, was 11-5 at the All-Star break. He then injured his right shoulder August 18 after being hit there by a line drive. At the time he was 14-6 and in strong contention for the Cy Young Award. The Yankees are anxious to see what he'll do in an injury-free year. Rhoden vows, "I know that when I'm 100 per cent and pitching well, I can run off some wins."

Al Leiter

Just by taking the mound for his first major league start last September Al Leiter set a team record, becoming the 48th man to play for the Yankees in 1987. By the time the then 21-year-old southpaw left the mound he cut that number in half, giving himself the chance to make the 24-man roster in 1988. Right from the start Leiter came out firing, striking out six batters in the first two innings of his major league debut. He started 1987 in Columbus where he suffered a broken nose and while working his way back at Double-A Albany he went on the DL with a tender left shoulder. Leiter came back strong, winning two post-season games for Columbus before making his debut with the Yankees. After looking impressive for New York the baseball world took note. The Yankee brass turned down several offers for the youngster over the winter and now Leiter is vying for a spot in the team's rotation. "After last year I have a real shot at making the team," he says. "That's all I can ask for."

Charles Hudson

41 PITCHER

A storybook season, without the happy ending. Charles Hudson began the year as a long reliever, but he became a last-minute replacement in the Yankees home opener. He pitched a three-hit masterpiece and started the year with six straight victories. This streak included the first nine-inning shutout of his career. Then the roof fell in. In his next seven appearances, including two in relief, he struggled with his control and was optioned to Columbus. Hudson returned to the bullpen in July, and in August ran off a string of 22 scoreless innings. But while he had flashes of excellence, he was inconsistent from appearance to appearance. Despite everything the hard-throwing righty led the team with six complete games and two shutouts, was second on the club with 100 strikeouts, and third with 11 wins. If the Yankees can work out Hudson's problems of 1987, he could mean the difference in their 1988 pennant hopes.

Tommy John

25 PITCHER

A group of players were sitting in the Yankee clubhouse last year reading an article on Tommy John. "What are they saying about the aging lefthander?" John asked, making fun of the references that the game was beyond him. In 1987 he had the last laugh. The number 65 he wore last spring signified his chances of making the club. But this was a man who came back from dramatic elbow surgery in the 1970s and is said to be pitching with a teenage arm. He looked like it last year. John was wearing his customary 25 after spring training, and at age 44 became the Yankees most durable pitcher. He led the team in starts (33), innings pitched (187 $\frac{2}{3}$) and was second in wins (13-6). It was his most impressive year in all of these categories in nearly five seasons, giving this veteran of over 23 major league seasons new hopes for a strong 1988. "You have to accept the fact that you are physically less than you were when you were 22 or 23," he admits, "but I also know I can pitch a whole lot better now than I did then."

It takes 400,000,000 years to make a Bourbon as good as Old Grand-Dad.

Once there was this huge inland sea. Part of it covered what's now Kentucky.

Then Mother Earth shrugged her geological shoulders, and what was seabed, rich in calcium and phosphates, became dry land.

Over the next few hundred million years, it all turned to limestone. Which brings us up to today and Old Grand-Dad.

You see, water that's trickled and seeped its way through limestone is the best water there is for making Bourbon.

And nowhere in America—not even Tennessee—is there better limestone for water to trickle and seep through than under the soil of Old Grand-Dad's home: Kentucky's legendary Bluegrass district.

It's what makes our Bourbon so great (and incidentally, our bluegrass so blue).

That's not to say you can't make a tolerable Bourbon if you're extra particular about the quality of the grains you use, like we are. You also have to make sure your new white-oak barrels are charred just so, like we do. And it certainly helps if your Bourbon-making skills have passed down through generations, like ours have.

But without our homegrown limestone water, you'll never ever match the choice, mellow taste that makes Old Grand-Dad the undisputed head of the Bourbon family.

Mike Pagliarulo

13 THIRD BASEMAN

Quietly, without much fanfare, Mike Pagliarulo is developing into one of the finest third basemen in all of baseball. With a blue-collar work ethic, this determined professional is best known for his "get dirty" style of play. In 1987, only his third full season with the Yankees, he improved his power stats for the third straight year, while providing consistent and sometimes spectacular defense at the hot corner. Often considered the next coming of third bagger Graig Nettles, Pags doesn't want to be compared to anyone and has set out to establish his own place in Yankee history. His 32 home runs and 87 RBI were both career highs, with his homer total matching Nettles for the second highest single season total hit by a Yankee third baseman (surpassed only by Nettles' 37 in 1977). Pags also led the team with 12 game-winning RBI, and showed marked improvement against left-handers, including four homers off southpaws. His only real disappointment was a .234 average which, with the way he works, will improve. "I always say my goal is to get better," he said. "I've always improved in the past."

Jerry Royster

46 INFILDER

A utility player is like a patch. You don't think about it until you have a hole somewhere. Jerry Royster came to the Yankees in an August 26 trade with the White Sox, to sew up a few holes. And with injuries plaguing several members of the team, Royster did just that. The versatile veteran came to New York and appeared in 18 games, seeing action at second base, third base, shortstop and in the outfield. Royster had a total of 33 chances in those positions combined, and committed only two errors. He was just as steady at the plate, hitting .357 (15-42) as a Yankee. Those numbers include some timely hitting, like going 2 for 5 as a pinch hitter with three RBI and two game-winning RBI. Royster's patchwork will again be counted on in 1988.

The official N.Y. Yankees time machine!

TRAVEL THROUGH 83 YEARS OF PINSTRIPE GLORY IN THE MOST FABULOUS PICTORIAL HISTORY EVER ASSEMBLED!

For as long as anyone can remember, the New York Yankees have been the symbol of dominance, prosperity and power in baseball — perhaps the most famous athletic team in the world!

And now the story comes alive, in the new revised edition of The New York Yankees: An Illustrated History.

It's a picture-packed panorama of the baseball dynasty from its humble beginnings, right through its unequalled record of 33 Pennants and 22 World Championships!

You'll see all the greats — the Babe, Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio, Yogi Berra and Mickey Mantle — men who have passed from the playing field into folklore. Plus all the latter-day guardians of the Yankee legend: Don Mattingly, Dave Winfield, Ricky Henderson, Tommy John, Lou Piniella, Ron Guidry.

And who could forget those remarkable Yankee owners and managers: Miller Huggins in the 1920s; Joe McCarthy, who perfected the dynasty in the 1930s and 1940s; the legend unto himself, Casey Stengel. Houk. Martin. And of course, George Steinbrenner.

You'll relive hundreds of unforgettable moments, captured in over 500 vivid photographs. The first "subway series" with the Giants in 1921. Grover Cleveland Alexander's incredible strikeout of Tony Lazzeri in the 1926 World Series. Don Larsen's perfect game in the 1956 series. Reggie's awesome power display in the 1977 series. And Mattingly's dramatic capture of the 1984 batting title.

The New York Yankees: An Illustrated History is the men and the moments. A magical journey through time with the most loved — and envied — team in all of sports history.

New York's Hometown Paper

Jay Buhner

54 OUTFIELDER

Ever since he was acquired from the Pittsburgh organization in 1984, Jay Buhner has done nothing but excel as a Yankees farmhand. The strapping, young Texan enjoyed his finest pro season last year as he hit .279 with 85 RBI and an International League-leading 31 home runs. He capped the year off by getting called up to New York for most of September. In the Bronx, Buhner impressed Yankees followers with his strong arm, good range and quick, powerful swing. Buhner may have a tough time becoming a Yankee regular in 1988, but he is sure to be a prominent fixture in the near future.

Bobby Meacham

20 SHORTSTOP

He's been the lost man since starting 155 games at shortstop for the Yankees in 1985, but based on his performance last year Bobby Meacham earned a strong look in 1988. Meacham started 1987 in Columbus where he learned to play second base, and then spent the first half of July on the DL with a sprained right ankle. From that point on, Meacham went on a tear. After changing from a switch-hitter to a strict right-hander, he finished the year with an impressive .271 average and showed newfound power with a career high five homers. Even more importantly, Meacham committed only 10 miscues in 77 games with New York, where he played both short and second. If he continues to improve at that rate, Bobby Meacham will be a force to be reckoned with in 1988. "I'm a better player now than I ever was," Meacham says, "and I just want to continue to reach my potential."

Scott Nielsen

52 PITCHER

Never say never, and at age 29 Scott Nielsen isn't giving up on his chances of staying in the major leagues. Nielsen was re-acquired by the Yankees in a winter trade with the White Sox, after he split 1987 with Chicago and their Triple-A club in Hawaii. He saw limited action for the Sox, but the Yankees know full well what he is capable of doing. Nielsen had been in the New York organization since 1984, and made his major league debut with a win for the Yankees in July 1986. He made it two in a row in his next start, registering his first career complete game and shutout. Nielsen finished at 4-4 with the Yanks in '86, leading the team in individual shutouts with two while tying for the lead with two complete game victories. In fact, three of Nielsen's seven major league wins have been complete game shutouts. The right-hander, who can start or relieve, is looking to have that type of success for a whole season.

Jose Cruz

88 OUTFIELDER

“We’ve been looking for some lefty hitters who can come off the bench,” Billy Martin said at spring camp.

Enter Jose Cruz, a two-time National League All-Star, who has hit .300 or better six times in his major league career. At the age of 40, Cruz may no longer be able to play every day, but the line driving lefty showed in camp that there is still plenty of pop left in his bat. The outfielder owns a .283 BA and has over 1,000 RBI during his 16-plus years in the major leagues.

“From what I’ve seen, he’s taken care of himself and can still swing the bat,” Martin said. “We’ll be in good shape now.”

ON THE WAY UP

MITCH LYDEN ... Catcher ... 6'3", 220, 23 years old, bats and throws right-handed ... selected by the Yankees in the fourth round of the 1983 June draft ... opened the '87 campaign at Columbus, but was optioned to Albany-Colonie in late May ... hit .253 in 71 games at Albany ... committed only five errors in the 61 games he caught there ... still has home run potential.

STEVE SHIELDS ... Pitcher ... 6'5", 230, 29 years old, bats and throws right-handed ... signed with the Yankees in November 1987 as a six-year minor league free agent ... spent 1987 with the Mariners organization, going 3-2 in 16 appearances with Triple-A Calgary and 2-0 in 20 appearances with Seattle ... a former starter who has been with four organizations.

HENSLEY MEULENS ... Third baseman ... 6'3", 190, 20 years old, bats and throws right-handed ... signed with the Yankees as a free agent in October 1985 ... had an outstanding 1987 campaign in Prince William ... showed tremendous potential at the plate, hitting .300 with 28 home runs and 103 RBI in 116 games ... was named to the Carolina League All-Star team in only his second year of pro ball ... developing as a fielder but already a lethal offensive weapon ... nicknamed Bam-Bam ... finished '87 season in Fort Lauderdale.

RANDY VELARDE ... Shortstop ... 6'0", 185, 25 years old, bats and throws right-handed ... acquired from the White Sox in January 1987 ... split the '87 season in Albany-Colonie and Columbus, hitting .317 and .319, respectively ... played eight games in New York late in the year ... excellent glove man with a good bat.

AMALIO CARRENO ... Pitcher ... 6'0", 170, 24 years old, bats and throws right-handed ... signed with the Yankees as a free agent in November 1983 ... was 6-6 last year with Columbus, Albany-Colonie and Prince William ... a starter-turned-reliever who is quickly beginning to mature.

BILL FULTON ... Pitcher ... 6'3", 195, 24 years old, bats and throws right-handed ... Yankees' second round pick (secondary phase) in the 1983 June draft ... spent majority of last season with Columbus ... made 31 appearances (including 19 starts) and went 7-8 with one save ... made three relief appearances with Yankees in September ... features a rising fastball and outstanding curve.

The car you drive represents a big investment.
So doesn't it make sense to keep it running the way it was made to run?

With AC-Delco parts.

They're engineered to match the performance requirements of your car. They don't just fit. They match. Dead on.

I'm not the kind of guy to take chances. I want to know everything's the way it's supposed to be. That's why for more than 40 years I've been using AC-Delco parts.

I wouldn't even think of messing with anything else. And if I don't want to take chances, neither should you.

Canon EOS

More than autofocus. Easier than ever.

EOS 650

EOS 620

Only Canon could create a camera like this. EOS: A marvel of photographic simplicity, creativity, and technology. The amazing EOS 650, and the even more advanced EOS 620.

EOS is total simplicity. Its sensitive autofocus system can catch both fast action shots and low-light shots with crystal clarity—perfectly exposed by an amazingly accurate and flexible exposure system. Film handling is totally automatic too, with a 3fps motor drive. And a setting called "Green Zone" makes the camera mistake-proof for beginners.

EOS is the only autofocus camera with computers and motors in both the body and its full line of EF lenses—some with a revolutionary ultrasonic motor. For the first time, there's no mechanical lens/body coupling. And instead of lots of switches and knobs, EOS presents an almost button-free body, with everything you need to know displayed on an LCD screen. And EOS dedicated speedlites make the system perform even more brilliantly.

Simplicity, creativity, technology. This is a camera you have to experience first-hand. Drop by your Canon dealer, and see why no other camera comes close; why the ultimate autofocus is Canon EOS.

autofocus is Canon EOS.

YANKEES BROADCASTERS

PHIL RIZZUTO

The one and only "Scooter," the greatest short-stop in Yankees history, is in his 32nd year of giving viewers the inside word on the Bronx Bombers. Phil's outgoing personality and lively banter have spiced up the Yankees broadcasts since he started the job after ending his brilliant career on the ballfield. He never rests while at work and that dedication shows during broadcasts. Simply put, the Scooter on the air means fun for the fans.

HANK GREENWALD

Hank Greenwald starts his second campaign as a Yankees radio voice, but he's no stranger to baseball broadcasts. In his 31 years of broadcasting, Hank has covered football, basketball and baseball and is most noted for his seven years of service as the voice of the San Francisco Giants. His love of the game and endless enthusiasm has already endeared him to Yankees listeners over WABC Radio.

BILL WHITE

Having shown his smarts of the playing field for 13 major league seasons, Bill White has continued to do the same in the Yankees broadcast booth for the past 18 campaigns. Bill's insights and frankness make it a treat for Yankees fans watching the game on television. Having Bill White in the booth guarantees a well-reported game.

BOBBY MURCER

After spending 1987 as a Yankees batting instructor, Bobby Murcer returns to his favorite duty as a Yankees broadcaster on SportsChannel, the club's cable affiliate. Bobby left his playing days behind in 1983 to begin a career in broadcasting. He was in the booth for the second half of that season and again in 1986. Few people know the Yankees organization better than Bobby Murcer.

MICKEY MANTLE

Mickey Mantle, one of the greatest and most popular players in major league history, is back for his third season on selected SportsChannel cablecasts. Elected to the Hall of Fame in 1974, he holds countless Yankee team records and is a three-time MVP selection. Mickey's presence in the booth is a very warm sight for the Yankee faithful.

TOMMY HUTTON

This is Tommy Hutton's second season as a Yankees radio broadcaster. After spending 17 years in pro ball, the former infielder turned to broadcasting in 1981 as a regular on the Montreal Expos broadcasts. Today Tommy turns his upbeat manner and knowledge of the game to the attention of Yankees fans. Hutton works alongside Hank Greenwald in the WABC Radio booth.

KEN "HAWK" HARRELSON

One of the most colorful personalities in baseball, the "Hawk" is in his second season as a SportsChannel broadcaster. Before he came to New York, Harrelson was Executive Vice President of Baseball Operations for the White Sox. He also spent 10 years broadcasting White Sox and Red Sox games following a nine-year major league career. The Hawk really knows how to make a baseball game an entertaining experience.

A Tradition of Excellence.

So ask them to bring out their best.

If art is the highest expression of the imagination, Hitachi has made a fine art of technology. Take our VM-6000A S-VHS video camera. Its picture quality is far superior to conventional VHS cameras. And with its advanced MOS image sensor, you can be sure of vivid, lifelike reproduction.

Then there's our CT3175 Big Screen TV. It has digital 2TV so you can watch two channels at once — and "surround sound." Furthermore, its 31" aspherical screen provides a bright and crisp picture not normally found on such a big screen.

These products embody Hitachi's longstanding commitment to meet human needs through technology. Whether in energy, industry, information and communications, or consumer electronics, Hitachi improves the quality of life every day.
